TRANSFERS ITS WHALEBACKS. Bessemer Company Turns Over Its Fleet to Lake Superior Consolidated.

DULUTH, Minn., Nov. 16.-The Bessemer Steamship Company, owned by John D. Rockefeller, has transferred its big fleet of whalebacks, numbering twenty-nine in all, to the Lake Superior Consolidated Iron Mines, a corporation also owned by Rockefeller, but in which others are interested. The boats transferred include ten steamers and nineteen barges. The details ten steamers and nineteen barges. The details of the transfer are not known here.

The Lake Superior Consolidated Iron Mines is a peculiar concern. It has a capitalization of thirty millions, but no shares of stock have been issued. It is managed by four trustees, three of whom are employees of Rockefeller. They have sole charge of the trust. Trust certificates have been issued to the stockholders, but there are no stockholders' meetings and no voting of stock. The stockholders here are alarmed at the report. Twenty of the boats have been tied up all of this summer and have earned nothing, and the prospects for the coming season are for small profits in the vessel business.
